Overview:

Don Nelson is a freelance sound engineer with a decade of experience in the industry; covering production mixing, post editorial and studio. He works emphatically on every project to create a robust understanding of the needs of his clients and the opportunities and challenges in each shooting environment. Whether TV, documentaries, commercials or VR films, his expertise stand out as much as his dedication to building effective working relationships with cast and crew.

Don frequently brushes shoulders with established production companies working on groundbreaking TV and film from the BAFTA winning 'Amy' with Dir. Asif Kapadia, to documentary projects with Steve McQueen. Broadcasters include Netflix, BBC, National Geographic, Channel 4, Amazon, Sky and Vice. Don has worked with such a range of contributors representing the livelihoods of indigenous communities, social entrepreneurs, dancers, musicians, ideological extremists, the one per cent, and various minority groups.

On occasion you can find him delivering workshops at LCC.
